Is construction moving forward at PDX?

The coronavirus pandemic has put many workplaces on hold, but PDX is critical infrastructure for our region. We're safely keeping construction moving — adapting our plans to preserve jobs while ensuring the health of our workers. We started the PDX Next program to upgrade outdated facilities, make PDX more seismically resilient and prepare for growth in our region. Those needs haven't changed. We're making progress on these essential projects so the airport continues to serve our communities now and in the future, through economic recovery and beyond.

How are you keeping construction workers safe?

Our PDX family has come together to keep essential services up and running and critical projects in motion — we're following official guidelines while taking extra precautions to keep everyone safe and healthy. Port of Portland leadership is working with our construction partners to ensure the highest safety standards on all of our job sites. This includes strict social distancing and deep cleaning as well as contact tracing and supporting ill team members to stay home and self-isolate. Keeping construction moving safely means we can help keep 1,250 people working and continue to support dozens of local businesses.

When will the Concourse E extension be complete?

We're on track to unveil the Concourse E extension this summer. This bright new home for Southwest Airlines opens at PDX thanks to our many partners, who have worked through challenging times to cross the finish line. We're cheering on Skanska, more than 50 local construction subcontractors, Hennebery Eddy Architects, Fentress Architects, Tillamook, Jamba, Evergreens, Stumptown, Calliope, Your Northwest Travel Mart, Tender Loving Empire, Bambuza, Juliett, Starbucks and artist Jacob Hashimoto.

Where can I share stories about PDX People who are going above and beyond as well as suggestions for keeping employees healthy and safe?
